Miss Susan Crabbe, Miss Selfridge and Pittsburgh Heiress, 17, Elopes to Wed

Married to Edmund Hunt-Uses Own Automobile for Honeymoon Trip.

Special Despatch to The New York Herald. Pittsburgh, Pa., May 4.—"Somewhere in the South" Miss Susan Crabbe, strand-child of the late Robert Pitcairn, former resident assistant to the president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, is enjoying her honeymoon with her young husband. Edmund Hunt, of Greensburg. They eloped to Cambridge, Ohlo, last Saturday and were married. The affair was kept secret until to-day.

The trip from this city was made in the bride's automobile after she had escaped from the parental home, Cairncarque, Elisworth avenue, this city, Mr. Hunt is 24 years old and is the son of Clinton Hunt of this city, who is president of the Memphis Steel Construction Company. He was educated in Memphis, Tenn., and Atlanta, Ga. The bride is 17 years old and heir to an estate valued at $20,000,000.

"We do not know where E Imund and his bride are," said the mother of the bridegroom to-day. "They are somewhere in the South and we presume they are enjoying their honeymoon. The last word we had from our son was a telegram announcing their marriage."

In direct contrast to the pleasure of the bridegroom's parents over his marriage is the attitude of Mrs. Victor Lee

In direct contrast to the pleasure of the bridegroom's parents over his marriage is the attitude of Mrs. Victor Lee Crabbe, mother of the bride, who is reported to be preparing to seek an annulment of the marriage. When asked if this report was true Mrs. Crabbe refused to discuss the elopement The mother of the bride had no intimation of the clandestine courtship, which is said to have been carried on while the couple were enjoying long rices in Miss Crabbe's automobile.

Investigation disclosed that Miss Crabbe had fortified herself for her wedding trip with extensive purchases of wearing apparel at local shops, which were charged to her mother's account. The only word received frum her by her mother was a telegram saying she had been married to young Hunt.

bright material, but it should have several tucks taken in it so it wouldn't trip over itself as unintentionally as one of the feminine players did every time she made an exit. As it was, there was a smother of songs and dances during the first act, which settled nothing except that Miss Tessa Kosta is more restful than ever to look at, and that when she opens her mouth to sing she stops the toothache. While she rippled up to her high notes with bellike ease one forget that the creeking like ease one forgot that the orchestra worked harder than the librettists, B. C. Hilliam and Gitz Rice, who also were the composers, to make the piece a success.

It wasn't until the beginning of the second act that the production was here.

Mr. and Mrs. Reginald M. Lewis have returned from California, after an absence of three months, and are at the home of his mother, Mrs. Frederic E. Lewis, 23 West Fifty-second street.

WASHINGTON.

Were the composition in success.

It wasn't until the beginning of the second act that the production made by derail Bacon ran into a good breeze of entertainment, and then it blew a gale of merriment. That was when the five male principals gave an imitation of a man and his friends waiting for the wife to dress, and also mimicked an agitated alse in a movie house trying to see past a woman's hat—scenes which had nothing to do with the actual story and were therefore highly successful. While the piece was without a male chorus, if leaned very heavily on the masculing and they made and they made and the production made by derail of the production mad the piece was without a male chorus, it leaned very heavily on the masculine gender in its principals, following the law of compensation, and they made these hilarious bits of byplay, conventional enough in conception, seem like a whole show in themselves.

It was then Hugh Cameron came forward to put the laughs in circulation. Previous to that this comedian, who did so much with skimpy material in "The Meanest Man in the Werld," had striven nobly, but had little opportunity except to fill in the intervals while the orchestra rested. But a good comedian dies hard, and in these burlesque scenes he made himself everybody's pet. He has

He has the rough and ready sang-froid of a side show barker, and after he had once established himself everybody's pet. He has the rough and ready sang-froid of a side show barker, and after he had once established himself as the comic benefaction of the evening everything he did held the royal key to laughter.

There was some kind of plot, in which a wealthy American girl who managed to keep her skirts clear even if she did take Paris frivolously and was called "Princess Virtue," presumably because she was an American, was sought for her money by a French tango dancer and an Austrian baron, already popular in Paris despite the recent war. But whenever one seems about to be compelled to follow the vague wanderings of the plot Cameron bobs up, and a merciful oblivion of chortlings ensues.

Frank Moulan was sometimes gay and sometimes gulte funny. Earl Foxe danced easily, and so did Bradford Kirkbride and Allen Fagan, while Miss Alice Maison swing-into line gracefully whenever the orchestra put the terpsichorean urge on every one. Miss Sarah Edwards and Anne Page also were among those who really mattered

The music of the composing duo carried itself along without any difficulty, and the chorus, composed exclusively of the plot cameron to be presented. He died and carre, a young man with young ideas, took his place.
